this analysis of the extent of trade integration of sub saharan african ssa countries in the global economy as well as within the region over the 1995-2013 period focuses on four key concepts: 1) trade openness captured by import and export flows; 2) the centrality in the global and regional trade network, a measure that takes into account not only the size of trade but also the number of trade partners and the respective weight of these trade partners in global trade; 3) gravity model estimates that account for country and region specific determinants of bilateral trade flows; and 4) global value chain (gvc) integration using both existing data and a newly available dataset based on multiregion input and output tables. This analysis led to several findings: 1) trade openness has increased strongly; 2) integration in the global economy has made the region more vulnerable to external shocks; 3) levels of trade flows emanating from sub-Saharan Africa are still only half the magnitude of those experienced elsewhere in the world; 4) the region still has ways to go to better integrate in gvcs; and 5) it is more critical than ever to make progress in filling the infrastructure gap by lowering tariff and nontariff barriers, improving the business climate, and access to credit, and continuing to enhance education outcomes.

This report summarises the results of work at the Nordiska Afrikainstitutet (Nordic Africa Institute, NAI) on the impact of structural adjustment implementation on the economies, states, and societies of sub-Saharan Africa. It consists of two essays and an appendix listing research projects which have been or are being carried out under the auspices of NAI. The first essay raises a series of conceptual and methodological questions in the context of a presentation of some of the main empirical results obtained from extended field work carried out during the course of 1992 and 1993 in Kenya, Tanzania, and Zimbabwe. The second essay presents the three main themes: private trading networks and structures, the changing political economy of land, and popular forms of social provisioning that constitute the core of the second phase of NAI's structural adjustment research, and in so doing provides a review of aspects of the adjustment literature. This report is therefore an attempt both at stock-taking and agenda-building as part of a wider quest for deepening our understanding of the structures and processes of socio-economic change associated with the crisis and adjustment years in contemporary africa
